First Cosmetic Surgeon: Gradually, surgeons and doctors incorporated parts of what was being used for reconstructive surgery to introduce cosmetic surgeries. Such procedures date back to before the common era. However, such techniques were performed primarily in central Asia. His way of surgery involved grafting the skin with a small bridge of tissue. The missing skin in another body part would eventually grow as per the natural skin cell reproduction. Gradually, the techniques of plastic and cosmetic surgery became more refined and precise. However, such surgical procedures were categorized under standard therapeutic surgeries. In 1798, Pierre Desault of Greece named such surgeries as plastikos, which means molding.
