The magazine started featuring a larger number of Porn actresses as Pets. He also became more and more enticed by the thrill of conspiracy, real or imagined. This would lead Guccione to pay millions for access to what usually ended up being a hoax. His "Alien Autopsy" adventuring was a great example of this. Toward the end of the 1990s Penthouse would delve into simulated, (and sometimes not simulated) sex in pictorials. Here is our guide to the Hard Penthouse Pets of the 90s. 1990 "Pet of the Year" Stephanie Page. Michael J. Fox opened up about a new spinal cord problem he's been facing, in addition to his ongoing battle with Parkinson's disease, in a new interview with New York Times Magazine. "I was told it was benign but if it stayed static I would have diminished feeling in my legs and difficulty moving," he said. "Then all of a sudden I started falling a lot. It was getting ridiculous. I was trying to parse what was the Parkinson's and what was the spinal thing." The mysterious health problem became so serious that the "Back to the Future" star had to get spinal surgery. "So I had surgery, and an
