New York is a city that constantly is being rebuilt. In the late 19th and the beginning of the 20th-century dozens of magnificent, old buildings were demolished to make room for new, modern development. However, in 1966, with the passage of the National Historic Preservation Act, the old, historic buildings are protected by federal law. In 1847, the Bank moved to new premises at the juncture of Fulton, Concord and Liberty Streets. After the opening of the Brooklyn Bridge in 1883 however, the city fathers decided to build a "grand avenue" leading to the approach of the bridge, and as the resulting plans entailed demolition of part of the Brooklyn Savings Bank in Liberty Street, the Bank's directors resolved to move to a new location. 4.
