Lost Love and other Stories

by Jan Carew

SUMMARY

All the stories in this book have one thing in common – one or more strange things happen. In Lost Love, a young man meets a girl and falls in love with her. Nothing strange there, but the girl lived 350 years earlier, and the village that she lives in only reappears in our time once every ten years. The young man decided that his love for the girl is greater than his love for the present day and decides to be there the next time the village appears, and to stay with the girl in her time.

In The Doll, a lonely man buys an old doll which turns out to have strange and, in the end, frightening powers. It can speak, it can move, it can even climb out of the ground where he buries it in fear. The doll finally kills the man by pushing him into a fire he has built to destroy the doll once and for all.

The Other Man is the story of a writer who shuts himself away in a small room to write a book. One day his pen disappears from the table, but this is only the start of the strange things which happen to him. He sees a man in the mirror with a beard – and he is clean-shaven. When the man appears to him at night, he decides it is time to leave the room ... but he has left it too late. The man with the beard has taken over his life, and he has become invisible, unable to move or speak. Even the writer's friend believes that nothing strange has happened. The writer has grown a beard, that's all.

The Charm asks the reader to consider the question – What makes a person brave? In the story, the narrator is not a brave man, until an old blind man who he meets by chance gives him a charm and assures him that nothing bad will happen to him. He believes in the power of the charm and lives through several battles with the charm in his possession. But one day, after inspiring a group of soldiers to follow him into attack, he realises that he has lost the charm. For a moment, he feels afraid again, until he realises that truly brave people are ones who are afraid, but still do dangerous or courageous things.

The final story, Journey's End, shows a possible pitfall of knowing the future. Tom, an unemployed young man, has his fortune told and learns that, if he travels on the following Friday, he will never arrive. When the man is offered a job interview in a town 30 kilometres away, he is delighted, until he realises that the interview is scheduled for Friday. Unhappily, he decides to take the risk. The prediction turns out to be accurate. The train suddenly comes to a stop and the young man never arrives at his destination. But the story ends happily. An old man, who Tom befriended on the train, offers him a job in one of his shops. If Tom had stayed at home because of the fortune-teller's words, he would never have met the old man or got the job. In this case, the strangeness is in the way that the future can turn out.

ABOUT JAN CAREW

Jan Carew is a teacher who teaches story-writing at the University of Cardiff in Wales. She has written over fifteen books for young people. She is very interested in different places and cultures and travels as often as she can.

BACKGROUND AND THEMES

The village in the first story, was destroyed by Oliver Cromwell. He was the leader of the republican forces, called Roundheads, who fought the royalist forces or Cavaliers during the English Civil War (1642–1649). The republicans won and the King, Charles I, was executed. But the republic did not last for long. In 1658, Oliver Cromwell died and in 1660, the heir to the throne returned to restore the monarchy as Charles II.

Teacher's notes

Communicative activities

The following teacher-led activities cover the same sections of text as the exercises at the back of the Reader and supplement those exercises. For supplementary exercises covering shorter sections of the book, see the photocopiable Student's Activities pages of this Factsheet. These are primarily for use with class readers but, with the exception of the discussion and pair/groupwork activities, can also be used by students working alone in a self-access centre.

ACTIVITIES BEFORE READING THE BOOK

Ask students to work in groups and discuss the following questions:

- 1 Has anything strange ever happened to you? What happened and when?
- 2 Can you, or anybody in the group, explain the strange event?

ACTIVITIES AFTER READING A SECTION

'Lost Love'

Ask students to work in groups and consider the problems that the story-teller will face in adapting to life 350 years ago.

'The Doll'

- 1 Ask students to think of different ways of disposing of the doll – and how the doll would have 'turned the tables' in each case.
- 2 Ask students to role play a conversation between the man and the doll, in which the man asks why the doll is doing all these things and the doll explains what he wants the man to do so that he (the doll) will go away.

'The Other Man'

Ask students to work on their own and write a final paragraph which gives a completely rational explanation for the events in the story. Perhaps the most obvious is that the story-teller has been on his own too long, without eating or drinking properly, and he has started to have hallucinations. He wakes up to find himself in hospital, with the friend explaining what had happened to him.

'The Charm'

Ask students to work in groups to say whether they have a lucky charm and if so, what it is and how they think it may have helped them in the past.

'Journey's End'

Ask students to work in groups and write a prediction for each of the other people in the group. The predictions are then jumbled and students try to find the predictions which were written for them.

ACTIVITIES AFTER READING THE BOOK

Ask students to work in groups and discuss the following questions.

- 1 Which story is:
  - the best?
  - the most frightening?
  - the most believable?
  - the happiest?
  - the saddest?
- 2 Do any of the stories have a moral? What is it?
